

Informationen zur Betreuung von Abschlussarbeiten (B.A./M.A.)

Schritte zur möglichen Betreuung und Anmeldung der Arbeit:

- Bitte kontaktieren Sie mich spätestens vier Wochen vor der geplanten Anmeldung der Arbeit.
- Idealerweise sollten Sie bereits ein Seminar bei mir besucht haben und Ihr Thema aus dem thematischen Seminarkontext entwickeln.
- Sollten Sie mich ohne vorherigen Seminarbesuch kontaktieren, stellen Sie bitte sicher, dass sich das Thema Ihrer geplanten Arbeit an meinen thematischen und methodischen Schwerpunkten in Forschung und Lehre orientiert. Informationen diesbezüglich können Sie meiner Personalwebsite entnehmen: [https://www.angl.hu-berlin.de/departments/staff-faculty/professors/prof-dr-mark-schmitt/research-fields](https://www angl.hu-berlin.de/departments/staff-faculty/professors/prof-dr-mark-schmitt/research-fields). Um eine optimale thematische Beratung gewährleisten zu können, werde ich – auch aufgrund der hohen Zahl an Anfragen – die Erstbetreuung von Themen außerhalb meiner Expertise ablehnen.
- Bitte vereinbaren Sie zur Vorstellung Ihres Projekts einen Sprechstundentermin über das Sekretariat via jana.sodtke@rz.hu-berlin.de
- Bitte bereiten Sie für den Sprechstundenbesuch ein konkretes Thema und einen konkreten Untersuchungsgegenstand (Primärtexte und ggf. auch Forschungsliteratur) vor.
- Wenn eine Betreuung Ihrer Arbeit in Frage kommt, planen Sie bitte für das Erstgespräch etwa 15-20 Minuten ein.

Nach der Betreuungszusage:

- Bitte reichen Sie vor der endgültigen Anmeldung der Arbeit ein Proposal/Exposé zu Ihrer geplanten Arbeit ein, das auf etwa zwei Seiten den Titel der Arbeit, eine kurze Einleitung in das Thema, die Primärgegenstände und die Forschungsliteratur sowie Ihre These vorstellt. Außerdem sollte das Proposal ein vorläufiges Inhaltsverzeichnis bzw. eine Gliederung der Arbeit enthalten.
- Bitte senden Sie das Proposal als Worddatei an mark.schmitt@hu-berlin.de
- Nach einer Betreuungszusage stehe ich während des Bearbeitungszeitraumes für maximal zwei weitere Sprechstundentermine à 15 Minuten zur Verfügung. Bitte bereiten Sie Ihren Besuch und Ihre Fragen gut vor, damit wir die Beratungszeit optimal nutzen können. Bitte haben Sie Verständnis dafür, dass ich aufgrund der hohen Betreuungslast keine längeren Textproben Ihrer Arbeit vorab lesen kann.

Format der Arbeit:

- B.A.-Arbeit: ca. 40 Seiten/80.000 Zeichen (Bearbeitungszeit zwei Monate)
- M.A.-Arbeit: ca. 60 Seiten/120.000 Zeichen (Bearbeitungszeit fünf Monate)
- Einseitiger Druck
- Zeilenabstand 1,5
- Times New Roman, 12 Pkt.
- Für alle weiteren formalen und strukturellen Vorgaben sowie Informationen zum inhaltlichen und methodischen Aufbau nutzen Sie bitte die „Guidelines for Written Assignments“, die Sie in den Moodlekursen zu meinen Seminaren und im Anhang in diesem Dokument weiter unten finden.
- Bitte reichen Sie mir neben der regulären Einreichung über das Prüfungsamt auch eine digitale Version Ihrer Arbeit ein (PDF per Mail an mark.schmitt@hu-berlin.de).

Guidelines for Research Papers

Content:

- 1. Notes on Writing Term Papers and Theses in English and American Literary and Cultural Studies
- 2. Guide: Writing a Thesis Statement
- 3. Checklist

2. Guide: Writing a thesis statement

What a hypothesis/thesis statement should do

- It shows the reader what your paper is about and how you will approach the topic.
- It narrows your topic down to the particularities (from the general to the particular).
- It shows what your contribution to the field of research will be.
- It is a valuable claim about your object of study that you have to support by arguing consistently throughout your paper.

Your thesis statement is part of the introduction of your paper. The purpose of the introduction is to sketch your object of study, your thesis regarding this object and its relevance for a given field of research ("what and why"), e.g.: why is the particular text ¹ /object you're dealing with worthy of study and to what specific area of literary/film/cultural studies will your examination of this particular text/object contribute? In a further step, you should emphasise the methods and theories with which you will approach your object of study ("how?"), e.g.: how will you read and analyse your particular object of study?

In summary, while composing your thesis statement, you always need to ask yourself the three questions:

- what are you going to look at and what are you going to do,
- why are you doing it, and
- how are you going to do it?

These questions are sub-steps of your research question which should always guide your thesis statement and everything you're doing throughout your paper.

Have a look at this quote from the introductory paragraph of Sonia Lupher's article on Ben Wheatley's film Kill List, published in the journal Critical Quarterly which I dissect for you in the side comments:

"Ben Wheatley's second feature, Kill List (2011), is generally considered a horror film. [...] Wheatley himself describes Kill List as a horror film. Yet, apart from a few foreshadowing moments in the first two acts, Kill List seems at first a family drama-turned-crime film; in part for this reason, critics often use the term 'slow burn' to unite these early, pensive scenes with the horrific frenzy of the final act. In these pages I ask, in the broadest sense, what kind of horror film is Kill List? What in the film's tone, even before the third act, points to its designation as a horror film? How do elements from Wheatley's early films – notably his short 'trick' films – manifest themselves in Kill List, and to what effect? I will revise the concept of slow burn to discuss how Kill List establishes its tone, particularly in moments of shock placed strategically throughout the film." (Lupher 29)

Always bear in mind that you're communicating with your readership when you're writing an academic text. The thesis statement and a clear indication of the aspects mentioned above is an important tool in order to tell your readers what your text is about and what they can gain from reading your text.

Works Cited

Lupher, Sonia. "Slow Burn, Interrupted: On Tone and Horror in Ben Wheatley's Kill List." Critical Quarterly, vol. 58, no. 1, 2016, pp. 29-35.

¹ In line with the cultural studies notion of "text", "text" is here to be understood in the broadest sense: films, pop songs, TV shows, fashion items are of course as much a "text" as a novel, poem, short story etc.

Kommentiert [MS1]: This is the very first sentence in Lupher's article. She introduces her object of research and thus addresses the question of what she's going to write about: a particular film and its contribution to a film genre. Thus, she'll discuss a particular text in order to gain insight on a more general area. She takes this up a few sentences later when she asks "in the broadest sense, what kind of horror film is Kill List?"

Kommentiert [MS2]: This part is already indicating what Lupher's claim (i.e. her hypothesis) regarding her object of study will be: Kill List is not quite a horror film, but challenges us to re-think the notion of what a horror film is.

Kommentiert [MS3]: Those are Lupher's research questions. Note how she moves from the general to the specific: her area of research is film studies and the horror genre, her specific object of study is Kill List, and even more particularly, its strategies to evoke horror through means which aren't necessarily standard genre tropes -i.e., she will argue that Wheatley uses certain strategies to evoke his unique brand of horror. Thus, Lupher indicates to the reader that she will study the film Kill List as a horror film, and more specifically, she will look at particular aspects of the film. That is, she tells you what methods or what approach she is going to use in order to study the text and how she's going to do it (i.e. by comparing Kill List to strategies previously used by Wheatley in his lesser known early short films).

Kommentiert [MS4]: This is Lupher's thesis statement proper. She clearly formulates the aim of her article and what her contribution to the field of research will be. Note how this "mission statement" guides your own expectations as a reader: she tells you what you can expect to gain from reading her article, i.e. at the end of her article, you will know more about what a horror film can be and what Kill List as a film does to achieve horror in terms of tonality. The use of the formulation of intent is crucial here: "I will do X in order to prove/demonstrate Y."

3. Checklist

Before handing in your term paper, mid-term essay etc. check the following points:

1. Your text is properly formatted (see specifics above)
2. Your text has been spell-checked and proof-read by yourself and, if possible, a friend you can trust with language.
3. You have properly used your word processing programme. Please check your document for common typographical and formatting mistakes. Here are some of my pet peeves I regularly have to deal with:

Wrong formatting of quotation marks: this is how it should be done: “...”, ‘...’ – NOT “...”

Wrong use of apostrophes. This is an apostrophe: Butler’s. This is not an apostrophe: Butler’s. This is in fact an accent aigu (acute accent) and it belongs on an e like this: é. Where do you find the right key on your keyboard? See the image below. The key highlighted above is the accent, the one below is the apostrophe. This is the one to use for Butler’s.

You might think these things are trivial. And yes, they’re not the end of the world. But one of your core skills in your future professional life will be working with texts, and so your own written work should fulfil some minimum quality standards.

4. You have consistently used either British or American spelling.
5. You have used grammatically complete sentences (no ellipses!) throughout.
6. You have used paragraphs to structure your text and line of thought. A new idea equals a new paragraph. Your paragraphs are not merely one or two lines or one or two pages long (rule of thumb: approx. two or three paragraphs per regular page; see presentation slides on academic writing).
7. Your text contains a coherent line of argument, makes sure to indicate which theories and methods are being used and includes a proper thesis statement (see guide “How to Write a Thesis Statement” and presentation slides on academic writing).
8. You have consulted the secondary literature suggested on the syllabus and you have done additional research.
9. Please refrain from using regular dictionaries (such as Oxford English Dictionary, Merriam-Webster, Cambridge, Collins etc.) to provide redundant definitions of specialised terms and concepts. For example, if you write a term paper in a class on racism, it does not make sense to quote the Merriam-Webster definition of “racism” or “race”. First of all, you can assume a basic definition of “racism” as a given since you are writing for a specialised readership (i.e. me). Second, you have access to plenty of professional scholarly literature if you need to give a definition, such as the distinction between scientific racism and cultural racism. The same goes for everyday words that are used in a specialised context. For example, if you’re writing a term paper on whiteness and racism, you don’t have to tell me that the Merriam-Webster Dictionary defines “whiteness” as “the quality or state of being white.” This is a banality you can skip.

10. Your citation style adheres to the stylesheet for papers in British Cultural Studies (see above) and the MLA Handbook, 9th edition.
11. You have made sure that all thoughts and words that are not your own (i.e. all direct and indirect quotes, use of artificial intelligence tools such as ChatGPT) have been properly acknowledged and referenced in the appropriate style (see 3.). You are aware that failing to do so constitutes plagiarism, which is a serious offence that may result in legal action. Suspicious texts will be checked with plagiarism detection software Turnitin and AI Detector.
12. Your writing assignment has a meaningful title. No one wants to read a longer text that does not have a title. I certainly don’t and your essay or term paper will go to the bottom of the marking pile. Make sure your title is concise and not too redundant or convoluted. For example, “Racism” might be a bit vague. “Racism and Social Death”, however, might be just right. “Racism and the Role That Social Death and Whiteness and Blackness Play Therein and What It Means for Contemporary Postcolonial Societies and also Its Literature” might be a bit convoluted and clumsy. And I’m only pulling your leg a little bit.
13. The document includes your name and contact details (email) on the title page (term papers) or at the top of the first page (essays).
14. Your document name includes your name in the following format: “surname_seminar title_essay/term paper”, e.g. “Mueller_Britain’s Futures_term paper”. You are aware that documents whose titles do not include your name will be rejected.
15. For term papers: you have included the signed declaration of authenticity/academic integrity (Selbstverpflichtung). You can find the template on Moodle or here: https://fakultaeten.hu-berlin.de/de/sprachlit/lehre/selbstaendigkeitserklaerung_ab_2024.pdf.

Prof. Dr. Mark Schmitt

Notes on Writing Term Papers and Theses in English and American Literary and Cultural Studies¹

All term papers and theses need to be discussed with and approved by your supervisor before you start writing. So please make sure to make appointments in time.

1. Academic Writing

- A term paper brings together: your research interest, a subject of study (a text or several texts if you wish to compare them), a concrete topic/leading question, the secondary sources and your academic discussion of those.
- Argument: Your paper should present an argument in written form, so make sure that you have a leading question (Erkenntnisinteresse in German) and a thesis statement (following from that question).
- Provide a coherent argumentative structure; subtitles might help structure your argument.
- Use of Primary and Secondary Sources: Do not simply summarize primary or secondary sources. Instead, critically assess and discuss the sources in relation to your topic.
- Do not accumulate a number of individual statements. Rather, bring your sources together to provide a clear and coherent narrative of what you want to say about them and to support your argument.

2. Choosing a Topic/Finding Your Thesis or Question

- A topic needs to be academically relevant and move beyond your own value judgment: you cannot simply discuss why you liked or disliked a text/character or simply offer general descriptions of a source. E.g. a statement like “In this paper, I will write about the motifs in ...” is neither a question nor a thesis.
- You should base the topic on your own (research) interests but need to make sure you find a suitable supervisor.
- Focus on your primary source: what is interesting/unusual about the text? Are there formal characteristics you are interested in or specific historical or cultural contexts of the text and its work of representation? What has been said about the text or film in other academic writing?
- You should provide a close reading or a critical discourse analysis of your primary material – which you will have to have studied more than once.
- Set realistic limits: you cannot (and are not expected to) deal with every aspect of a work. Make an informed decision about which aspects you want to focus on.

¹ Thanks are due to Dr. Sibylle Machat (Europa-Universität Flensburg) whose guide “Some words on the mystery of writing a term paper” served as an inspiration for this guide.
Also check out the resources on the department webpage: <https://www angl.hu-berlin.de/study/org>.

- A good guiding question for theses on popular culture could be: “which cultural work does this text perform?” This question does not need to be explicitly stated, but it might be useful to keep it in the back of your mind.

3. Finding Secondary Literature

- While you are not required to cite all secondary sources that are accessible, make sure to use available resources such as the university library catalogue and databases. (If you have not done so already, make use of library tours and tutorials. All of these are available at: <https://www.ub.hu-berlin.de/>)
- Most importantly, Primus (the university catalogue which includes the MLA bibliography) should be your starting point to look up what books, articles or book chapters might be relevant. The MLA bibliography and the Literature Resource Center can also be accessed separately in the university network via the database catalogue DBIS on the library webpage. You will need to use a VPN to be connected to the university network to access all available materials (<https://www.cms.hu-berlin.de/de/dl/netze/vpn>)
- You might need to use interlibrary loan (Fernleihe) to get hold of some of the material. Before you spend money to have books sent over, however, it could be worthwhile to have a look at the libraries at the Freie Universität Berlin or the Staatsbibliothek if you are a member (<http://staatsbibliothek-berlin.de/>).
- Do not rely on sources like Wikipedia (these might help to give a first overview) but use and reference academic online and print resources. The following are all available in the library, either electronically or in print.
 - For information on authors, use the Oxford Dictionary of National Biography for the British and the American National Biography for the American context, as well as Kindlers Literatur Lexikon.
 - For general queries, check Encyclopaedia Britannica.
 - Consult glossaries of literary terms and introductions to literary studies for terminology (the Oxford Dictionary of Literary Terms is accessible in the Oxford Reference database). For film terminology, Louis D. Giannetti’s Understanding Movies or Richard Barsam and Dave Monahan’s Looking at Movies include useful glossaries.
- Especially for longer papers, such as BA and MA theses, reference management software such as Citavi or EndNote helps to keep your references in order. (Free full licenses are available for all students of the university. Check the library webpage for tutorials.)

4. Outline

- Once you have found a leading question and relevant secondary sources, you need to come up with a logical structure.
- The Introduction should introduce the thesis statement and describe the relevance of the topic and your chosen guiding question (without posing obvious or rhetorical questions). It should make the reader curious and explain the general structure of the paper without summarizing each part in detail.
- The Main body should be structured into relevant subsections with individual headings (avoid over-general section titles such as “main part”). In this section, you need to introduce and discuss relevant theoretical concepts and provide textual analyses/close readings of your primary source in relation to your research question and the theoretical concepts introduced.

- Do not: provide a plot summary (unless explicitly discussed with your instructor) or add a biography of the author (unless necessary for your argument). Do not add any other interesting trivia that have nothing to do with your question or thesis.
- The Conclusion is not a summary of the paper. Avoid simply repeating what you said before. Instead, you should pointedly alert the reader to your central findings. Rather than summarizing the argument and providing an opinion, the conclusion synthesizes the argument and provides a judgment (reached via the argument).
- Most importantly in structuring a term paper: avoid redundancy.

5. Theoretical Foundation of Your Research

- You need to put your argument in relation to the academic discussion (no ornamental name-dropping).
 - By the way: a “scientist” is a *Naturwissenschaftler*in*, a *Geisteswissenschaftler*in* is a “scholar” or “critic”.
- Use analytical terminology correctly (is it a metaphor or a simile? a hetero- or homodiegetic narrator? What shot size or camera movement are you referring to?). Use reference works² such as M.H. Abrams’ A Glossary of Literary Terms or the Oxford Dictionary of Literary Terms to double-check. Or consult Giannetti’s Understanding Movies or Barsam and Monahan’s Looking at Movies for film terminology.
- Literary or visual interpretation of subject matter should always be linked to an analysis of the formal composition: “exploring the form of the meaning and the meaning of the form” (Meyer 58).³
- Voicing an “informed opinion” means that you can agree or disagree with other authors by arguing with what is postulated in their texts.
- Avoid clichés and over-generalizations by all means (e.g. “human beings have always loved reading books”). Instead, you should present ideas like this: “In The Rise of the Novel, Ian Watt argues that the success of the novel form is linked to the increased importance of publishers and booksellers in eighteenth-century England (cf. Watt 53).”

6. Citing and Bibliography

- Plagiarism is a fundamental violation of academic standards and will result in your failing the paper. In severe cases it may have disciplinary effects beyond this.⁴
- Beware: not referencing correctly is a form of plagiarism, too.

² Cf. <https://www.angl.hu-berlin.de/study/org/tools/bibliography> for an extensive bibliography of reference books in literary and cultural studies.

³ Cf. Meyer, Michael. English and American Literatures. 4th exp. ed. Francke, 2011.

⁴ Cf. this helpful overview on plagiarism

<https://www.ub.hu-berlin.de/de/recherche-lernen/tutorials/lotse> (check the section: Zitieren und Plagiate vermeiden) and <https://www.hu-berlin.de/de/forschung/gute-wissenschaftliche-praxis>.

- Always, always acknowledge the sources you are quoting from, no matter if you are doing so directly (Watt 25) or indirectly in a paraphrase (cf. Watt 25) – you need to provide page references for both.
- Use both paraphrase and direct quotes, but make sure they take up no more than 1/3 of your paper. AI generated content too does not count as your original contribution and needs to be clearly marked. The use of AI might not be allowed for all MAPs, if in doubt, check with your supervisor (see more information on how to cite AI below).
- In a paraphrase, make sure to explain what the author is arguing in your own words (do not simply change a word here and there).
- Quotes that are longer than three lines (or, roughly, 40 words), are separated from the main text, justified (Blocksatz), indented (eingerrückt) and are formatted using single line spacing. Also, they do not require quotation marks.
- Quotes shorter than those three lines belong into the regular text and are put into double quotation marks (English: “text” – not German: „text“).
- If you have quotes within quotes (where, for instance, the secondary source you want to quote uses a quote from your primary text), turn double into single quotation marks for the interior quote (“Main quotation: ‘interior quotation’”).
- Avoid second-hand quotes: always quote from sources directly if possible.
- Quotes alone never replace argumentation: make sure that you explain what you are trying to show with a quote.
- A term paper should not read like a string of quotations with some connecting sentences in between them, but should rather showcase your own work, your own thoughts, with quotations supporting your line of argumentation.
- Follow a documented citational system: We recommend following the conventions suggested by the Modern Language Association (MLA) in their 2021 edition of the MLA Handbook for Writers of Research Papers (9th ed.).⁵ However, other citational systems, including earlier MLA styles, are acceptable if consistent in the paper (if in doubt, check with your supervisor).
- In-text citation is preferable to footnotes which should be reserved for information you might want to provide but which is not relevant enough to be included in the regular text.
- Examples for in-text citation:
 - Citing works with one author:
 “It was always pleasant crossing bridges in Paris” (Hemingway 36).
 Or, as Hemingway says, “it was always pleasant crossing bridges in Paris” (36).
 - Citing works with multiple authors:
 “Thus transformative media events do not respond to situations of urgency” (Katz and Dayan 168).
 For a source with three or more authors, list only the first author’s last name, and replace the additional names with et al.
 - Citing more than one work by the same author:

⁵ An overview of this style can be found, for instance, on the web page of the Purdue Online Writing Lab: <https://owl.english.purdue.edu/owl/>.

To avoid confusing the reader as to which of the author's books you are taking about, include a shortened form of the title to distinguish one work from the other. Put short titles of books in italics and short titles of articles in quotation marks.

"Who is the higher authority? Who do I call? Who saves me?" (Doctorow, Daniel 188).

"I wanted to log as many miles as I could before Bennett got up in the morning" (Doctorow, Loon Lake 141).

All texts cited (not everything you read) need to be included in your Works Cited list (also called Bibliography).

- General format of a Works Cited list:
 - o Your Works Cited should start on a new page at the end of your paper or thesis.
 - o Entries are listed alphabetically by the author's last name (an exception being sources without known author, in which case the title is listed first)
 - o Indent all lines following the first line of your reference by 1,25cm to create a hanging indent [hängender Einzug].
 - o Single space your entries and do not add spaces between entries.
 - o Printing out your bibliography in the end helps to spot inconsistencies.
- There are rules for how you refer to different kinds of works in your Works Cited. In general: capitalize each word in the titles of books, movies, articles, etc. – except for definite and indefinite articles (the, a, an), short prepositions or conjunctions (unless one is the first word of the title). Titles of books, journals and movies are always put into italics. Titles of poems, internet articles or journal articles go into "double quotation marks." General rule of thumb goes: larger works are italicized and shorter works are put in quotation marks.
- Here is a list of some of the more frequently used formats:

1. A book with a single author

Last name, First name. Title of Book. Publisher, Year of Publication.

Connerton, Paul. How Societies Remember. Cambridge UP, 1989.

2. A book with more than one author

If there are more than three authors, you may choose to list only the first author followed by the phrase et al. (Latin for "and others"). Order the author(s) in the same way presented in the book.

Last name, First name, and First name Last name. Title of Book. Publisher, Year of Publication.

Dayan, Daniel, and Elihu Katz. Media Events: The Live Broadcasting of History. Harvard UP, 1992.

3. More than one book by the same author

List works alphabetically by title, list solo works first (disregard articles (i.e. sort The Argonauts under A rather than T).

Moylan, Tom. Demand the Impossible – Science Fiction and the Utopian Imagination. Methuen, 1986.
---. Scraps of the Untainted Sky: Science Fiction, Utopia, Dystopia. Westview Press, 2000.

4. A reprinted book

If it is a book by one author, then cite it as you would a book with a single author, but add the date of the original publishing after the title of the book, like this:

Equiano, Olaudah. The Interesting Narrative and Other Writings. 1789. Penguin, 2003.

5. A work in a collection (an article in a book)

Last name, First name. "Title of Essay." Title of Collection, edited by Editor's Name(s), Publisher, Year, pp. Page range of entry.

Kristeva, Julia. "The Ethics of Linguistics." Modern Theory and Criticism – A Reader, edited by David Lodge and Nigel Wood, Pearson Longman, 2008, pp. 349-58.

6. An article in a journal

Author(s). "Title of Article." Title of Journal, Volume, Issue, Year, pp. Page range.

Buehrer, David. "'A Second Chance on Earth': The Postmodern and the Post-Apocalyptic in García Márquez's Love in the Time of Cholera." Critique, vol. 32, no. 1, 1990, pp. 15-26.

- Please note that you do not necessarily need to add an additional URL/DOI if you list articles in print journals even if you access PDFs as long as you list vol./no./pp.

7. Citing a website

Author, or compiler name (if available). Name of Site. Name of institution/organization affiliated with the site (sponsor or publisher), Date of resource creation (if available), DOI (preferred), otherwise include a URL or permalink. Date of access.

Felluga, Dino. Guide to Literary and Critical Theory. Purdue U, 28 Nov. 2003, www.cla.purdue.edu/english/theory/. Accessed 10 May 2006.

8. Citing a film

Title. Director, Film Studio or Distributor, Release Year. (If relevant list performer names after director's name.)

Eileen. Directed by William Oldroyd, Neon/Focus Features/Universal Pictures, 2023.

9. Citing a TV Show

Recorded Television Episodes

"Episode Name." Series Title, Writer, Director, Distributor, Year of Distribution.

“The One Where Chandler Can’t Cry.” Friends: The Complete Sixth Season, written by Andrew Reich and Ted Cohen, directed by Kevin Bright, Warner Brothers, 2004.

Netflix, Hulu Disney+ etc.

“Title of Episode.” Series Title, season, episode, Studio/Distributor, Date of Release. Platform, URL.

“94 Meetings.” Parks and Recreation, season 2, episode 21, NBC, 29 Apr. 2010. Netflix, www.netflix.com/watch/70152031.

Entire Series

Creators (Last Name, First Name). Series Title. Production Companie(s)/Network, Year of Release.

Steinberg, Jonathan E. and Robert Levine, creators. Black Sails. Starz, 2014.

11. Citing a YouTube Video

If the author’s name is the same as the uploader, only cite the author once. If the author is different from the uploader, cite the author’s name before the title.

Deren, Maya. “Meshes of the Afternoon.” YouTube, 1943, uploaded by MuminekBambo, 22 January 2021, www.youtube.com/watch?v=dWQcJyn981M.

12. Citing a Song or an Album

Artist Name. “Song/Track Title.” (if applicable) Album Title, Label, Date of Publication. Website Title or Medium (CD/MP3/MIDI/Cassette/Vinyl), URL. Access Date.

Nirvana. “Smells Like Teen Spirit.” Nevermind, Geffen, 1991.

Beyoncé. “Pray You Catch Me.” Lemonade, Parkwood Entertainment, 2016, www.beyonce.com/album/lemonade-visual-album/. Accessed 02 Feb. 2024.

13. Citing a Video Game

Alan Wake 2. Directed by Sam Lake and Kyle Rowley, Remedy Entertainment/Epic Games, 2023. Sony PlayStation 5 game.

14. Citing Social Media

See <https://style.mla.org/citing-social-media/>.

15. Citing Artificial Intelligence

If you use AI in your research or writing, all passages need to be clearly marked as you would citations and cannot replace your own analysis. Please check in advance with your supervisor, if the use of AI is allowed for the MAP you are taking. Make sure you reference the source (e.g., ChatGTP) and your prompt. For more information on how to cite text production models, see <https://style.mla.org/citing-generative-ai/>.

For a complete reference guide, see the MLA Handbook (9th edition).⁶

⁶ More information here: <https://style.mla.org/works-cited/citations-by-format/>.

7. Language

- Present your paper in grammatically correct and idiomatic English (be consistent in your use of either British or American English spelling).
- Check your spelling (team up and proofread each other's papers before handing them in).
- Avoid colloquialisms.
- Avoid passive constructions like: "In this paper it will be shown that" Rather write: "This paper deals with" or "In the following, I will argue that" (you can use "I").
- Remember that whenever you summarize sections of a fictional text, you use present tense.
- Avoid run-on sentences.
- Check your punctuation (avoid exclamation marks and excessive comma use).
- Avoid biased or harmful language:
 - Please avoid unnecessary iteration of racist or ableist language.
 - Please use gender neutral language:⁷
 - Try to find gender neutral alternatives to gendered nouns. For example, say "humankind" instead of "mankind"; "mail carrier" instead of "mailman"; "police officer" instead of "policeman"; etc.
 - Avoid using the generic "he." When referring to non-specific individuals or generalized groups, do not use "he." Instead, use plural constructions (e.g. do not say, "a student should always hand in his paper before the deadline" but rather "students should always hand in their papers before the deadline"), or the singular "they" (e.g. "If someone is late with their paper, they might get in trouble.")
 - When referring to a specific person, make sure to use the pronouns they themselves identify with. If you do not know the gender of the person, use the singular "they."

⁷ For further guidelines, please also consult the Purdue OWL guides on "Gendered Pronouns & Singular 'They'" https://owl.purdue.edu/owl/general_writing/grammar/pronouns/gendered_pronouns_and_singular_they.html, and on "Stereotypes and Biased Language" https://owl.purdue.edu/owl/general_writing/academic_writing/using_appropriate_language/stereotypes_and_biased_language.html.

8. Formatting

A term paper should include the following:

- Title page (for BA and MA theses, please use the templates provided by the Fakultät/Lehre und Studium/Bachelor or Master):

The title page is not numbered and should include the following information:

- name of university and department
- current semester (e.g. SoSe XX / WiSe XX)
- date the paper is handed in
- type and title of the course (including module)
- lecturer's name
- title (and subtitle) of your paper
- your name, address, email, subject-specific semester
- your Matrikelnummer
- Table of contents

Pagination begins on the first page after the table of contents.

- Main part (do not call it that in the table of contents) with sub-sections
- (Appendix; only if needed)
- Works Cited/Bibliography

The pages you use for the bibliography do not count towards the overall page count of your paper but do have a page number in the table of contents.

- Selbständigkeitserklärung⁸

- Layout:

- font: Times New Roman, font size 12pt (Arial or Calibri are also acceptable)
- line spacing of 1.5 in regular text (not double spacing as recommended in US guides)
- line spacing of 1.0 in indented quotes
- left and right margin should be 3 cm (or 4 cm left and 2 cm right in the case of a bound manuscript)
- top and bottom margin 2 cm
- justify your text (Blocksatz)

- Length: Please consult the requirements for the MAP or BA or MA thesis in the Studien-/Prüfungsordnung.

9. Criteria for Evaluation

Your paper will be judged according to the following criteria:

- Content:

- Rigor and plausibility of the argumentation (logical, contextually correct)
- Relevant topic, convincing objectives, clearly identified problems
- Convincing close reading that supports your argument
- Selection and use of quotations (their relevance and the quality of your interpretation of them), quality of research for material and secondary literature
- Well-supported thesis

- Form:

- Convincing structure
- Smooth and well-organized argumentation (Pay attention to the logic of individual paragraphs and transitions between chapters. Avoid redundant summaries at the beginning and end of subchapters.)
- Formally correct documentation of sources and list of works cited (as well as title sheet and table of contents)

- Language:

- Spelling
- Grammar
- Style
- Register (academically appropriate language)
- Word choice and sentence structure

- Contribution:

- Presence/clarity of your own original ideas

Appendix:

I. Possible Topics (find your own in conversation with your supervisor; this is just for general orientation)

Approach:	Central Question/interest:	Possible Title:
Theory and Text	What does Freud write about apparitions and the uncanny? How does James enact these perceptions in The Turn of the Screw ? How would a psychoanalytic reading explain the novella and what would it leave unanswered?	A Psychoanalytical Reading of Henry James' The Turn of the Screw
Intertextuality	Which intertextual allusions can be found in Alice Walker's The Color Purple to Zora Neale Hurston's Their Eyes Were Watching God and which purposes/effects do they have?	Intertextual Allusions in Alice Walker's The Color Purple
Transmediality	How does the movie Blade Runner transmediate the novel Do Androids Dream of Electric Sheep ? And which ideas does the novel Neuromancer take from the film? How do themes and effects transform in transmediation?	Philip K. Dick, Ridley Scott and William Gibson: A Lesson in Transmediality
Comparison of two novels/texts regarding one thematic focus	To what degree do the motifs of rise and fall in Theodore Dreiser's Sister Carrie and Frank Norris' McTeague reflect the trajectories of Naturalism/Determinism?	Rise and Fall: Dreiser's Sister Carrie and Norris' McTeague
Race, Gender, Sexualities and TV	Ostensibly, the vampires in the HBO series True Blood stand for homosexuality – but there are also allusions to race, trans* and queer sexualities, religion, social status etc. What is the function of this ambiguous play with marginalizations?	The Vampire Trope in True Blood
